

The news of the spectators' Guide

Spectators' No-go areas

Careful: the spectators' no-go areas will no longer be marked with the traditional red tape. This will be replaced by ban signs which will make it easy to understand where it is forbidden to stay (see picture).

The safe spectators' areas will be marked by green tape. The spectators must stay behind these tapes (see picture) and not between the road and the tape. All the areas not defined by green tape will be forbidden to spectators.

In the areas deemed dangerous there will be warning signs which will read "no go area" so as to warn, also visually, that it is best to keep away from that spot.

This system will make it easier to understand what can be done and what must not be done and will help the marshals who must see that spectators respect the rules.

Google Maps

The Google Maps technology will provide a valuable support to spectators to choose and identify the areas where to watch the Rally.

The Special Stage start, finish and spectators' areas described in the guide will be marked on the maps.

In flight over the Special Stages

Thanks to the Google Maps technology, it will be possible to have an aerial run over the SS, a sort of birds' eye view which will enable fans to realise the main attractions on the rally route.
